It's reasonable if it is some program that's not available in India, but what many students want to do is just something available in India itself. Why do they spend extra money just because they are able to afford? Also job markets in many countries are same or worse than that in India.

I am from Nepal and just arrived India. I have rented a flat and made house rent agreement. I am studying in an institute in Delhi. Is this all enough for opening an account in any of the banks in India?
