Travelport, a travel commerce marketplace providing distribution, technology, payment and other solutions for the $7 trillion global travel and tourism industry, and CityJet, an independent regional airline, announces today the successful complete integration of the European airline with Travelport. This enables Travelport connected travel agencies using Galileo and Worldspan to take advantage of the seamless bookability of CityJet fares and ancillaries within their normal workflow.

The airline, headquartered in Dublin, operates around 700 flights a week to several destinations across Europe. Its' operational hub is London City Airport with additional tertiary networks from Cardiff Airport and Cambridge International Airport. CityJet also recently celebrated 20 years of service and introduced a CityJet IATA operating code, WX, to their network.

"As a truly independent European airline, we believe that we can reach new heights by tapping into the valuable travel agency distribution channel," said CityJet CEO, Christine Ourmières. "Travelport is one of the world's leading distribution providers. We look forward to strengthening our relationship as well as taking advantage of its strong industry expertise and global reach."

Robin Ranken, Head of European Airline Relationships at Travelport said "The successful implementation of CityJet highlights our commitment to our travel agency customers. We look forward to working with our valued airline partner to maximize their exposure to travel agents and increase the accessibility of their fares."
